

What Wins – Imagination or Will?

Which is stronger, your imagination or your will?

OK, here is the test.

Someone puts a one foot by twenty-five foot plank on the floor and everyone walks the plank easily without falling off. You could do it, couldn't you?

Now, imagine that plank between two buildings twenty-five stories high. Could you, having already walked across it on the ground, walk across it again twenty five stories high?

Why is it easy to walk the plank on the floor, but not twenty-five stories high? It is as simple, and as complex, as the fact you imagine you can do it when it is on the floor so you do it. Twenty-five stories high you imagine you cannot do it and, it's true, you can't do it.

If you imagine you can't do it, it is impossible for you to do it. To do anything you have to first imagine you can do it. Then, you can do it.

Your will is your conscious mind. Your imagination is your subconscious mind. Your subconscious mind is in control and overrides the conscious mind and will.

The subconscious mind is responsible for the operation of your body and all the organs. You life is controlled by your subconscious mind that effortlessly and unknowingly keep your heart pumping, the blood flowing, and all the organs working without any conscious effort.

When your conscious mind and subconscious mind are in conflict, the subconscious always wins. Period. No exceptions.

What about the power of positive thinking? What about written